RANDOM MONDAY

Over on our Facebook page, we like to do this little thing called Facebook Random Question of the Day. And it's exactly that: random. Here's our question: What TV show would you most like to see remade and why? Check out some of the responses we received. Want to be a part of our social media revolution and see your thoughts here next time? Like us at facebook.com/theredeye.

Chrissie Montana-Knepp: NONE!!! Can we get some originality please???

Vince LiFonti: Chicago Code, it employed so many actors and crew in Chicago.

Bruno Pieroni: Lost. Maybe the second time around it'll make sense.

Alyssa Bitchmonster Bell: They should bring some shows back with the original cast instead of remaking them. Xena and Buffy the Vampire Slayer are two i really miss!

Jen Smith: I Love Lucy. Definitely a classic.

ABC TV FILE

Danielle Basso: The only thing that should be remade is old game shows. Old TV shows should stay classic!!

Lisette Medina: I don't want to see ANY more damn TV shows get remade. That goes for movies too. This has got to stop!

Pedestrians at Michigan Avenue and Pearson Street, an intersection with a high number of vehicle-pedestrian accidents. E. JASON WAMBSGANS/TRIBUNE

DANGER ZONES

CITY: HIGH RATE OF PEDESTRIAN CRASHES, DEATHS 'UNBELIEVABLE'

Chicago Tribune

About 80 percent of vehicle-pedestrian crashes in Chicago occur at intersections and commonly involve people crossing the street with the walk signal, according to a new city study.

The exceptionally high rate of pedestrians being struck, predominantly by turning vehicles while they are inside the presumed safe haven of crosswalks, was an unexpected finding that will prompt increased police enforcement on the No. 1 cause of pedestrian accidents—drivers failing to yield, officials said. More traffic safety technology is coming too, they said.

The city's most detailed analysis of crashes to date, which the Tribune obtained exclusively, revealed a soaring number of hit-and-runs as well as other alarming trends over a five-year period, touching all parts of Chicago from the Magnificent Mile to some of the poorest and most crime-plagued neighborhoods.

The sheer number of accidents between 2005 and 2009—17,487 crashes involving 18,377 pedestrians—represents a traffic-safety crisis, experts say. Pedestrian fatalities in Chicago hit a 16-year low in 2009 with 34 deaths, down from 88 deaths in 1994, according to the Illinois Department of Transportation.

Despite the improvement, pedestrian crashes still number about 3,000 a year in Chicago. In the past week alone, a 9-year-old girl was critically injured Wednesday by a hit-and-run driver on 87th Street in Gresham, and on Aug. 7 a taxi driver struck and injured two children crossing the street on North Michigan Avenue, police said.

The study found that 78 percent of all crashes and 80 percent of fatal and serious crashes occurred within 125 feet of the midpoint of an intersection—at crosswalks or nearby.

A state law that took effect in 2010 requires drivers to come to a complete stop for pedestrians in all crosswalks. The previous law required drivers to yield and stop when necessary.

It's too early to assess the effects of the law, officials said. But provisional numbers provided by IDOT for 2010 show 2,943 total pedestrian crashes in Chicago last year, 32 pedestrian fatalities and 409 serious injuries. Those accidents were not factored into the new study.

Among the more troubling findings of the study commissioned by the Chicago Department of Transportation is that an average of two hit-and-run crashes resulting in deaths or injuries take place each day in Chicago. Hit-and-runs account for 33 percent of all crashes and 41 percent of fatal crashes here, double the national average, officials said.

That's 5,534 hit-and-runs over the five-year stretch, causing 3,683 deaths and injuries, officials said.

"It's unbelievable, and it's a real crime," Chicago Transportation Commissioner Gabe Klein said. "I think we have this culture of speeding and reckless driving."

WHO? WHY? WHEN?

Here's a look at some key findings from the city's study of Chicago's vehicle-pedestrian crashes. TRIBUNE

Young victims

Young people 15 to 18 years old represent the biggest segment of pedestrian crash victims, the study found. It also determined that a high level of the crashes in which youths and teens are the victims occurred on the West and South sides, most intensely in Austin, Chicago Lawn and Auburn Gresham.

Taxicab effect?

In the downtown area, taxicab drivers were involved in 28 percent of pedestrian crashes and 34 percent of pedestrian accidents in high-crash corridors downtown, the study said. The rate fell to 2 percent outside the central business district, a change perhaps reflecting the heavy concentration of taxis downtown, officials said.

Day of the week

Many of the reasons behind the findings are not known, officials said. For instance, during the five-year study period, pedestrian crashes occurred most often on Thursdays and least often on Fridays and Saturdays. Nationally, Fridays are the biggest day of the week for vehicle-pedestrian crashes.

Tough times call for threesomes

The U.S. got its credit rating downgraded, the stock market's gone haywire and London is burning. Let's just get off our chests what we're all thinking: It's probably time to have a threesome.

Right? When the world so clearly teeters on the verge of social and economic chaos, there's really no reasonable response except to say to two other reasonably attractive people, "Look, we're all going to be wielding rolling pins and the splinters of broken guitar necks at each other pretty soon. Let's just grab your friend Sam(anth), get this done and go out for ice cream afterward."

I got to thinking about this after making the important sociological discovery of a phenomenon I've decided to call the "almost three-some," or "#almost3some" for the benefit of the Twitterverse.

I want you to look yourself in the heart and admit you know what I'm talking about.

The #almost3some came to my attention when multiple friends, male and female alike, mentioned that they had almost, they think, participated in some type of group sexual encounter with two other people. However, in each case something just didn't catch and the experience was narrowly — perhaps thankfully, perhaps regrettably — avoided. (Apologies that my discovery is confined to hetero-normative sexual practices and gives short shrift to the so-called "devil's threesome." Feel free to write angry letters to the editor.)

Women seem to come to the brink of an #almost3some mostly with a fellow female and mostly thinking, "I'm in if she's in." By which I mean it seems as though they are waiting for the other female involved to make the leap, and when neither manages to set things in motion, the whole endeavor is laughed off.

Heterosexual men, on the other hand, seem consumed by a sense of inadequacy. They find themselves thinking back to their #almost3some and wondering every day of their lives, "What more could I have done? We were a little drunk, we were all on my bed, Radiohead's 'In Rainbows' was playing. I just don't understand why that didn't turn into a threesome."

Of course, there are two important caveats to actually going through with the threesome. The first is the well-known truism that every man in the world is entitled to 0.4 threesomes in his lifetime. That's the average. This means when your friend has sex with two women at once, the math states that you probably will not, which is a fine reason for no longer being his friend.

The second is that once you've had a threesome, you are now a person who has done that, and you will never be able to not be that kind of person. It doesn't matter whom you tell or don't tell, a dim aura the shade of rust-red cool and ineffable melancholy will follow you for the rest of your life.

Still, as you slice at the marauding hordes with your splintered guitar neck, I doubt this will phase you.

RULES TO HIT THE ROAD

NOW

» Not required by the city's Department of Business Affairs and Consumer Protection for pedicab drivers or pedicab companies to have a permit or business license. Some companies and independent drivers have insurance policies.

PART ONE: REGISTRATION

PROPOSED

» Get a one-year pedicab business license for $175—a fee greater than a bicycle messenger license but less than a horse-drawn carriage license—if the pedicab owner is an individual, a corporation, a partnership or limited liability company.

» Have proof of public liability and property damage insurance policy with a coverage of $1 million "per occurrence, combined single limit, for injury, death, and property damage."

» Provide workers' compensation insurance for each pedicab operator. But if the pedicab operator owns his or her own pedicab, he or she is exempt from the requirement.

» Register each pedicab in operation and attach a $25 decal good for one year. Decals are capped at 200.

» Adhere to pedicab requirements: no more than 55 inches wide and 120 inches long, equipped with seat belts, spoke reflectors on wheels and reflective tape showing back and front width, hydraulic or mechanical disc or drum brakes, and battery-operated headlights and taillights visible for 500 feet.

» Apply for a pedicab operator's permit valid for one year and costs $25. Must have a valid state driver's license for two years or completed a driving course approved by the Illinois secretary of state; be at least 18 years old; certified by an Illinois-licensed physician that he or she has the capability to operate a pedicab; pass a drug test; and not be in debt to the city.

» Wear a pedicab operator's identification badge.

» Get a one-year permit for $150 from the Chicago Park District to operate a pedicab on its property from sunrise to 11 p.m., though not all pedicab drivers comply.

» Pass a safety course, have a valid driver's license and follow the rules of the road as required by some pedicab companies for its drivers.

PEDAL POWER

IS YOUR FARE FAIR? GOT INSURANCE FOR THAT RIDE? NEW PEDICAB RULES MAY BE EN ROUTE

By Leonor Vivanco

REDEYE

Chicago pedicabs could face new roadblocks under a proposal to license and regulate the bike taxi industry.

Ald. Tom Tunney (44th), whose ward includes Wrigleyville—a pedicab hot spot—last month re-introduced an ordinance that would, among other things, keep operators away from downtown before 7 p.m. during the workweek and require pedicab companies to carry workers' compensation insurance.

"I totally think we do need regulation and licensing and some control out there," said Robert Tipton, owner of Chicago Rickshaw's fleet of more than 20 pedicabs. But providing workers' compensation to drivers would be too costly for companies to afford, he said. Paying for liability insurance would be an added expense for independent owner operators.

Problems stem from the industry going unchecked, Tipton said. Currently, some pedicab drivers carry liability insurance and others don't use adequate braking systems. Uniform safety standards for pedicabs, its owners and drivers could level the playing field.

Chicago would follow other cities including New York, which began licensing pedicabs in 2009 after a pedicab crashed into a taxi, injuring the pedicab driver and passenger. At least

Roger Brownworth, owner of Roger Rickshaw, said driving a pedicab is an honest, hard way to make a living. "These guys are out on the street. If they're not working and hustling to try to make money, they don't make any money. It's not like they show up at work and sit on the Internet all day watching YouTube." LENNY GILMORE/REDEYE PHOTOS two fatalities in the U.S. have been reported in pedicab accidents—one in Seattle in 2008 and another in San Diego in 2009.

Regulations for pedicabs, one of the city's few unlicensed businesses, would safeguard the driver, owner and passenger, Tunney aide Bennett Lawson said. "We want to do it in a safe way that doesn't put anybody out of business but before it becomes unmanageable."

Drivers say the restriction from giving rides to passengers downtown can keep them from making money.

"We're for regulation, but some of the things in there clearly would make business almost impossible," said Lincoln Square's Christian Blume, 26, co-owner of Blume Brothers Pedicab. "They're trying to make it hard for us to work downtown, work anywhere in the city."

A new law would help the pedicab industry gain credibility, said Josh Musinski, 31, an independent pedicab driver who lives on the West Side and has been riding for five years.

"One of the bigger problems pedicabs have is being trusted and being viewed as responsible," he said.

The next step, Lawson said, is to consult with city officials, aldermen and the pedicab industry on the proposed ordinance, which does not set fare rates or ban advertising.

"We're not ramming it down anyone's throat," Lawson said. The goal is to have legislation in place so pedicabs could be licensed next season, which typically coincides with the start of baseball season in the spring.

Until then, pedicab drivers will keep enjoying the perks of the job: working outside, making their own schedules and getting a workout while charging their own fees, which vary depending on distance, number and weight of passengers.

"It's the best job I've ever had," said Brendan Blume, 24, who's worked as a farmer, life-guard and accountant. "I just find it the most rewarding. At the end of the day, I get so much out of it." LIVANCO@TRIBUNE.COM | @LVIVANCO

» Buy a pedicab. Denver-based Main Street Pedicabs, for example, retail for about $3,400 plus accessories such as seat belts and lights.

» Pay for incidentals such as maintenance, repairs and storage.

» Rent a pedicab for the day, week or month. For example, Chicago Rickshaw leases its pedicabs for $160 a week.

» Set fares to charge passengers, which vary depending on distance, number and weight of passengers, and difficulty such as hills.

» No rules or regulations to enforce other than bicycle laws.

PART TWO: OPERATION

PROPOSED

» Prohibited from operating a pedicab under the influence, blocking normal pedestrian or vehicular traffic, and riding on any sidewalk unless it is designated and marked as a bike route.

» Restricted from giving rides before 7 p.m. weekdays downtown from roughly Oak Street to Roosevelt Road and LaSalle Street to the lake but not including park district property. That means pedicabs wouldn't be able to pick up Michigan Avenue shoppers or tourists at Millennium Park.

» Banned from giving rides to more than three passengers in a pedicab at one time.

» Post a fare schedule. Can't demand a higher fare than what is posted unless it is a special tour with a fare agreed upon before start of tour.

» Pay a ground transportation tax of $1 for each pedicab for each day the pedicab is used.

PART THREE: ENFORCEMENT

» Subject to suspension or revocation of pedicab business license and pedicab operator's permit, impoundment of pedicabs, and fines of $25 to $500 per violation.

Friends and colleagues mourn Christina Santiago outside the Howard Brown Health Center on Sunday. HEATHER CHARLES/TRIBUNE

LGBT activist mourned

Christina Santiago, 29, was killed in Indiana State Fair stage collapse

Chicago Tribune

Alisha Brennon and her partner, Christina Santiago, thought they were about to have a perfect night as they sat in the front of the stage where country band Sugarland was set to perform Saturday evening at the Indiana State Fair.

But moments later, a powerful wind toppled the stage, killing Santiago, 29, a manager at Chicago's leading health center for the gay and lesbian community, and four others. The accident also seriously injured Brennon and more than 40 other concertgoers. Brennon remained in an Indianapolis hospital Sunday in critical condition.

"It wasn't hard to figure out where they were at," friend Veronica Hernandez said in a phone interview. Hernandez had read a Facebook posting Brennon made shortly before the accident that described the evening as "perfect."

"We had our hopes that they weren't where there were, that maybe they were in back getting some food," she said.

Santiago, a native of New York, had a major effect on Chicago's LGBT community, Hernandez and others who knew her said.

She was the programming manager for the Lesbian Community Care Project at the Howard Brown Health Center, officials there said Sunday.

Jamal Edwards, president and CEO of Howard Brown, said Santiago and Brennon had been together a little more than two years and were inseparable. Brennon did not work at Howard Brown, but she was such a constant presence there that she had many friends, he said.

Santiago "was a fierce advocate. She was as brilliant as she was beautiful. She was the greatest advocate for equal health care for all. That love doesn't die, it lives on," Edwards said.

"She has been a leading and driving force in the expansion of our women's health services division and a powerful advocate for all LGBT women," he added. "She's such a hard worker. She normally would be working this weekend, but this happened to be the time that they chose to enjoy together and hear the country music that she loved."

Santiago also was a programming chair for Amigas Latinas, a gay and lesbian advocacy group for Latinas in the Chicago area, Hernandez said. She regularly coordinated fundraisers for the organization.

"She was a Nuyorican, who showed an amazing amount of pride," Hernandez said, referring to Santiago's Puerto Rican and New York heritage. "As young as she was, she was very committed to the city of Chicago and to women. She was really good at organizing and planning with a purpose."

Parade kicks off back-to-school season with zeal

Chicago Tribune

The annual Bud Billiken Parade on Saturday signaled the coming end of summer with a new mayor and the same spirit that has brought music, food and old-fashioned politicking to Bronzeville for 82 years.

CELEB SIGHTING

R. Kelly cruised the route on a float advertising his most recent album, "Love Letter." The South Side native smiled and waved to the crowd as people shouted his name.

The parade, meant to get kids ready for school, was Rahm Emanuel's first as mayor, and he went at it with the zeal of a newcomer.

Emanuel jogged for much of the route along Martin Luther King Jr. Drive, swigging water as he zigzagged among flag twirlers and band members to shake hands with crowds calling his name from the edges of the street.

The new mayor has spent plenty of time during his first few months in office stressing the importance of a good education, and he took up the cause with impressionable parade-goers.

"He asked me if I'm acing school, what school I go to and stuff like that," 10-year-old Johnny Evans said after Emanuel slowed his frenetic progress to share some whispered words with the boy. "He told me to make sure I pass these grades, get to high school, college and pass."

The crowd was overwhelmingly enthusiastic toward Emanuel. Some attendees used their face time with the mayor to push policy goals.

"Don't raise the taxes," one man called out. A woman grabbed Emanuel's hand and told him: "We want you to help us out. Do what you've got to do."

Along with the politicking and the "get ready for classes" message, the Bud Billiken Parade is about an end-of-summer party.

One of a few large Chicago parades that take place in a neighborhood rather than downtown, Bud Billiken traditionally sees families and friends bring barbecue grills onto the wide parkways that flank the route and cook throughout the day. Saturday was no exception.

Kaleta Cooper reflected amid the barbecue smoke on how little the event has changed over the roughly 50 years she's been attending.

"It's a chance for everybody to get together, no drama, enjoy some good food and listen to some good music," Cooper said. "I wouldn't miss it."

Suspect taken back to Norway massacre site

4 OSLO, NORWAY The suspect accused of ambushing a political youth retreat and killing dozens of people in Norway last month returned to the island where the shooting rampage took place as part of a police investigation, authorities said Sunday.

Police said attack suspect Anders Behring Breivik "was not emotionally unmoved," but did not express remorse during his return to Utoya island Saturday.

"He did not express any regrets about what he had done," Police Prosecutor Pal-Fredrik Hjordt Kraby told reporters.

Police said they spent nearly eight hours questioning Breivik on Sunday and walking with him around the island during a reconstruction of last month's attack.

The Norwegian newspaper Verdens Gang published what it said were photos and video images of the reconstruction.

Anders Behring Breivik

The images show a blonde-haired man walking with police investigators around the island, moving his arms as if he were holding an assault rifle. The newspaper identified the man as Breivik.

Images show the man apparently wearing a bullet-proof vest and a harness that tethers him to police as they roam the wooded island.

In one video clip, he stands on the shoreline and appears to be taking aim at the water.

"The whole thing was quite intense," Hjordt Kraby said.

Breivik is accused of the July 22 bombing of Oslo government buildings in which eight people died and a shooting rampage on the island that killed 69.

When last month's shooting started, many of the 600 people at the ruling Labour Party's youth camp ran down a hill and to the water, survivors said. They said the shooter came after them, screaming, "You are all going to die!"

More than 1,400 arrested in riots

8 Police in London announced Sunday they had arrested 1,401 people in connection with violence, disorder and looting since riots broke out little more than a week ago. Some 808 of those people have been charged, police said.

Win some, lose some

After one preseason Bears game, who's hot and who's not?

RedEye

Fans got a short—very short—look at their 2011 Bears on Saturday night. And for the most part probably liked what they saw out of the defense. The offense, not so much. Here are the winners and losers after the 10-3 win over Buffalo.

WINNERS

Marion Barber

The Dallas castoff, who's been the talk of Bears camp, bolstered his chance to be Matt Forte's back-up with a 45-yard night—on just seven carries. Sure, a lot of that was against Buffalo's backup defense, but he still has the burst, the moves, the speed.

Jay Cutler

He completed a shovel pass to Forte for no gain but emerged uninjured. And, yes, that makes him a winner.

Johnny Knox

The demoted starter got one more catch than his replacement—Roy Williams—and he also reeled off a 70-yard kickoff return. His speed can not—and will not—be overlooked.

NUCCIO DINUZZO/TRIBUNE

LOSERS

Offensive line

The ragtag O-line, which gave up a league-high 52 sacks of Cutler last year, might have actually looked worse, giving up nine to the Bills.

Tight ends

All of them. Yeah, this offense isn't going to work for them. Unless they like blocking. If so, this is a dream come true. With Greg Olsen out of the picture, offensive coordinator Mike Martz can use these guys as little as he likes.

Jay Cutler

He'll be running for his life again this year. Sorry, bro.

Preseason? It's not too early to pray

I'm gonna need more sacks. No, no, no, take it easy, Jay Cutler, not those kinds of sacks.

I'm talking about my headwear. Honestly, I was hoping the NFL lockout would at least wipe out the preseason. I don't really like watching it. I like writing about it even less. But preseasons are a necessary evil. Like NBA regular-season games.

And what could be worse than a meaningless preseason game? How about one against the Bills. On a rainy night.

Actually, I should backtrack. The preseason isn't meaningless for the Bears. Not this time around.

Bears nation is worried. Worried about that offensive line. It's about as stable as that creaky, wood-and-rope bridge in "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom." At any moment it's going to collapse, sending some to their death (in our case, the O-line starters) and others hanging on for dear life (Cutler).

Nine sacks, people. In one preseason game. Oh, that's not meaningless. It means something. It means losing Olin Kreutz is gonna hurt. It means Cutler's gonna be hurt. It means trouble for the passing game. And the running game. ...

It means I'm gonna need more sacks.

1 What scared you about Saturday night's Bears game?	When I see "Buffalo Bills" on a scoreboard, I expect a number next to it with more than one zero. Not this time.	The constant barrage of expletive-laden tweets and texts I got. What were you expecting again?	I was in Canada and couldn't find a liquor store! They don't sell beer anywhere else.	Bears QBs sacked nine times. Nine times. (Ed Rooney voice.)	O-line - Olin = E. One big error.
2 What excited you about Saturday night's Bears game?	Did you see Amobi Akoye's pythons? It looked like he was smuggling two Elliotts in his arms!	That I didn't have to watch a 10-3 Bears-Bills slugfest. Sorry, choking on sarcasm over here.	The first quarter. Got too drunk to remember much else.	Marion Barber running like he stole something.	It wasn't a Cubs or Sox game.
3 What are the chances we've seen the last of Carlos Zambrano in a Cubs uniform?	Less than 100, which is to say, not as high as every Cubs fan should want them to be.	About as good as a chance you'll find me at the Bob when a Sox game is on. (VERY high.)	Same chance of me going to Canada again during football season. Zero.	There's a better chance we've seen the last of Kim Kardashian in the tabloids.	Jim Hendry still has a job so anything is possible.
4 How is this Zambrano drama going to end?	With thousands of fearful Gatorade coolers entering the Witness Protection Program.	I went to Ring of Honor Wrestling the other night, dude would fit right in. Trade him for a tag team?	Like all my dates do, in tears.	A dual suicide (his career, the Cubs' season) more tragic than "Romeo and Juliet."	How did "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" end?
5 The Fire have had so many ties this season that, to honor the many deadlocks, the Fire faithful has adopted the nickname "Congress."	I was going to make a "West Wing" reference here, but meh. Happy Monday, folks!	I still can't get over the "no beer in Canadian grocery stores" law. Isn't "beer for all" in their constitution?	... they could stock a Brooks Brothers store.	Nothing like a little bondage with your soccer.

KNEE-JERK REACTIONS

Just like the rest of the world, when RedEye staffers hear the news, we have our opinions—serious or not-so-serious. Here is some of the reaction to the Carlos Zambrano-Cubs drama.

Brian Moore

@redeyesportsguy

I have long defended—or more precisely, tolerated—Big Z because, at first, he was good, then he was entertaining. Now, he's neither good nor entertaining—just tiring.

Chris Sosa

@sayitisosa

Big Z keeps upping the ante with his meltdowns. So what's next, he flees to the moon? Cut him loose; his teammates deserve better.

Julie DiCaro

@juliedicaro

I'm shocked and appalled that someone with a notorious temper went off the deep end after 10 seasons of playing for the Cubs. What's next? Alcoholics getting DUIs in St. Louis?

Carlos Zambrano
MCT

Cubs, Big Z at war

The Carlos Zambrano-Cubs drama has turned into an all-out off-the-field war between management and the pitcher's agent.

The MLB Players Association will file a grievance Monday over the Cubs decision to send Zambrano to the disqualified list, where he'll go without pay for 30 days.

The Cubs believe Zambrano's agent, Barry Praver, was attempting to spin the story of Zambrano's "retirement" announcement by telling espn.com that the pitcher personally returned his belongings to his locker late Friday night after walking out on the team, suggesting it was a momentary lapse of reason.

But Zambrano actually sent a friend to return his belongings, which the Cubs placed in a nearby room while Randy Wells took over Zambrano's locker. Sources said Zambrano also left phone messages to Cubs personnel Friday night to say "goodbye" and "thanks," contradicting his agent's contention that the "retirement" remarks were made in private and not to be taken seriously.

General manager Jim Hendry was unavailable for comment Sunday. Praver did not return phone calls.

The grievance process could take awhile, and it figures to be contentious with Zambrano standing to lose $3 million in salary.

SUNDAY'S RESULTS

- » Cubs 6, Atlanta 5
- » White Sox 6, Kansas City 2

Zambrano's absence hasn't changed anything in the Cubs' clubhouse. The players still listen to Bob Marley after winning games, which they did for the 11th time in 14 games Sunday. No one is trying to make up for the loss.

"I can't throw two games," starter Matt Garza said.

Cubs manager Mike Quade hasn't spoken to Zambrano but denied leaving him in for the fifth inning Friday to take a pounding.

"It wasn't like you're leaving a guy in because you're mad at him or anything else," Quade said. "It was a team situation, and sometimes those things have to happen. And he's Carlos Zambrano. Why can't he take a breath and get back in it in the fifth and sixth inning and try to get through it?"

RedEye reporter Tracy Swartz is visiting nine major-league ballparks in nine days. Sunday, she was at U.S. Cellular Field. Here's her puncard to and from Chicago.

What could be better than seeing a Sox no-hitter into the sixth inning?

Sunday was cheerleader day at U.S. Cellular Field.

Scores of teenage cheerleaders wearing hair bows and more bronzer than Rob Lowe graced the stands during the game.

They jumped, they twirled, they looked befuddled during play.

In my dozen trips to the Cell during the past five years, I've never seen fans look so happy, and it had nothing (and everything) to do with the action.

WEST ON NORTH

2509 W. North Ave. 773-278-7710

The space: Owner Joe Sabath says the fenced-in wooden deck at his Humboldt Park bar and grill makes it "feel more like sitting in someone's backyard" but better, thanks to $4 vodka lemonades, deep-fried Twinkies ($4.50), palm trees and TVs for game-watching.

Seating: For 35 to 40.

Life span: Sabath hopes to keep the deck open as far into fall as he can with heat lamps, weather permitting. An outdoor fireplace also is planned.

With fall lurking around the corner, it's all patios on deck

By Erin Brereton

Now that the blistering heat wave and crazy summer storms have passed, it feels like summer in Chicago finally has started. Too bad there are only three weeks until Labor Day, right? Make the most of it by scoping out these outdoor spaces, which made a late entry into the al fresco scene this season.

Better late than never

BARN & CO.

950 W. Wrightwood Ave.
773-832-4000

The space: The owners of this Lincoln Park barbecue bar replacing The Grand Central knocked out part of the building's front to create an outdoor area fit for sipping a bloody mary ($10) or spiked sweet tea ($7), served in canning jars for a country-fied vibe.

Seating: For 40 on the patio and sidewalk cafe.

Life span: Football tailgating parties and the occasional pig roast are in the plans for Saturdays and Sundays this fall. Managing partner David Mitria says heat lamps or a fire pit to keep the crowd cozy also could be in the works.

RITTERGUT

10 S. Wacker Drive
312-559-1832

The space: At this Loop wine bar's waterfront patio, diners can lean back in their wicker chairs and watch tour boats cruise down the Chicago River while sipping a white wine flight ($12).

Seating: For 48 during the week. The patio's closed on Saturdays and Sundays because of Wacker Drive construction.

Life span: As long as the temperature stays above 50, the patio will stay open into the fall. Heat lamps may be added.

FRONTIER

1072 N. Milwaukee Ave.
773-772-4322

The space: This Noble Square bar debuted a spacious beer garden in July and plans to open its outdoor bar within the next week. Coming with it are pitcher drinks, such as the gingery Frontier colada ($20). DJs spin on the weekends to create a "fun, festive environment," said owner Mark Domitrovich.

Seating: For 100.

Life span: Frontier plans to winterize its beer garden with a retractable roof, fabric walls and a heating system by October. Until then, a fireplace offers warmth on summer nights when the temp sinks into the low 70s.

NATIVE FOODS CAFE

1484 N. Milwaukee Ave.
773-489-8480

The space: Wood from a 102-year-old North Side building was used to make this recently opened Wicker Park cafe's 75-foot patio. Planters house the fresh mint used in the eatery's lavender lemonade ($2.50), plus sweet potatoes, parsley and other ingredients.

Seating: For 65.

Life span: Owner Andrea McGinty is aiming to stay open through Nov. 1 so the restaurant's Oct. 31 pumpkin carving contest can be held outside. Heat lamps will be wheeled out when cooler temps hit, but McGinty is counting on Chicagoans' tenacity. "We're tough," she said. "We can eat outside in 55-degree weather!"

JPA 5K Run & Walk

Move to Stop
the Cycle of Child Abuse.

The Juvenile Protective Association (JPA) is proud to be holding the 3rd annual JPA 5K Run/Walk. The race will be followed by a post race celebration with music and festivities.

The JPA is a non-profit agency devoted to protecting children, healing the scars of abuse and neglect, and repairing families. We provide intervention and treatment to break the intergenerational cycle in families that abuse or neglect their children.

BIRTHDAY!

Leo

July 23-Aug. 22

You'll enjoy a lot of sexy dialogue as Mercury turns you into a full-time flirt. You'll send racy pictures of yourself or leave lusty notes for your honey under the pillow. Everything you say will be sexually suggestive.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

You need a break. Your personal life is out of control, and you have no clue what to do about it. Be patient until Mercury comes out of retrograde Aug. 26. Engage in mindless retail therapy or watch silly movies to feel better.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

With the moon opposite your sign, you and your partner could be on different pages. You want to get married; she wants to date other guys. Wait it out.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Prickly Mars is making you more intense than usual. You'll demand that your lover satisfy you 24/7. Having standards is one thing but being a selfish bitch is another.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Something dramatic is going to happen. You'll finally make your move on that hot guy or gorgeous girl. The moon is making things interesting.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

You could become attracted to someone who is as hard-working as you are. You'll bond as you chat about the stock market or share views about the economy. When you're ready for seduction, you'll slyly mention the size of your 401(k).

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

You're ready to tell someone off as Mercury inspires you to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

A sensitive moon is turning you into a romantic fool. You're crushing hard on somebody you just met, and you don't know what to do about it.

Aries March 21-April 19

Four friendly planets are turning you into a sexual dynamo. You'll start a harem. You'll acquire countless new admirers. All of this sensual pleasure will make it impossible to focus on anything outside the bedroom.

Taurus April 20-May 20

If you're in a relationship, things have been dull for a while. Venus will spice things up this week. Suddenly, you'll remember why you fell in lust with your partner. The two of you will have fun reigniting those flames of passion.

Gemini May 21-June 21

You've been thinking about that cutie from your past. You're worried that you made a mistake calling off that wedding or breaking up with that nice girl back in college. Mercury retrograde is tempting you to revisit the old days. Not a great idea.

Cancer June 22-July 22

You anger somebody as you share your real feelings. Mars is making you brave about expressing unpopular views. But anger can be a sign of attraction, so pay attention to how this drama plays out.

Cee Lo Green performs at the Chicago Theatre on Friday.

GOT A TIP?

Do you have a hot tip on a celebrity sighting in Chicago? E-mail Luis or tweet him @aboutluisgomez.

It's a bird, it's a wrestler, it's ... Cee Lo—and his many colorful costumes

It may be hard to believe after seeing him wear a chicken costume while performing at the Grammys in February and a Darth Vader getup while singing at the 2006 MTV Movie Awards, but Cee Lo Green insists he's really not that different from you and me.

"I'm a normal guy at heart," Green said Friday while sporting a plain black T-shirt and sweatpants after rehearsing for Macy's Glamorama at the Chicago Theatre. "But on stage, they don't pay me for normal."

Green's outfit during his Lollapalooza performance Aug. 6 was hardly normal. The 37-year-old singer wore spiked black shoulder pads and during the show told the audience, "Don't you dare let this wonderful outfit go to waste."

His inspiration? Professional wrestling and heavy metal.

"I got those shoulder pads from the Road Warriors," Green said of the legendary World Wrestling Federation tag team, also known as Legion of Doom.

Cee Lo at Lollapalooza

"I'm a big, big fan of theirs. I told my assistant stylist, 'I want these made.' It's punk, it's rock, it's metal. It's equal parts Road Warriors and Judas Priest."

Green's inspiration for the colorful chicken costume, which he wore while performing "Forget You" with Gwyneth Paltrow, also came from the entertainment world.

Cee Lo at the Grammys

"When it comes to the stage, I can't help but be inspired by people like George Clinton, Elton John and Alice Cooper," Green said. "The chicken suit was from Elton John. He wore it on 'The Muppet Show' in 1977 while performing 'Crocodile Rock.'"

Saldana
REUTERS

Zoe Saldana doesn't feel sorry for herself when she doesn't get a part. "We have a black president right now, so why the [bleep] would I sit down and talk about how hard it is for black women in Hollywood when there's a black president in my country?" the "Avatar" star said in the September issue of Ebony. Message received.

Dudes: You're busted!

What is the No. 1 TV show watched by men ages 18-24? You'll never guess, so we'll just tell you: "American Idol" performance shows, according to thr.com. (Don't worry, fellas. We won't tell your girlfriends you secretly like Ryan Seacrest and Co.) No. 2 on the list is the more predictable "Family Guy." The top late-night show in the demo is "The Colbert Report," followed by "The Daily Show." That was your moment of Zen.

Baby, baby, baby!

It was a big baby news weekend in the celebriverse. On Saturday, Jessica Alba and husband Cash Warren became parents to a girl, Haven Garner, people.com reports, and "30 Rock" star Tina Fey confirmed she gave birth last week to a girl, Penelope Athena. The celeb gossip site also reports Hilary Duff announced she and husband Mike Comrie are expecting their first child. Cigars for everyone!

Clowning around

Juggalos love Charlie Sheen. The hard-core music fans gave the former "Two and a Half Men" star a rousing welcome when he hosted the "Gathering of the Juggalos" on Saturday in downstate Illinois. As TMZ captured on video, they chanted his name, threw stuff and screamed his "Winning!" catchphrase repeatedly. Go figure.

THE DIGIT

$27.5 MILLION

Moviegoers still are going ape as "Rise of the Planet of the Apes" secured the No. 1 spot at the box office for a second straight week, just holding off "The Help's" $25.5 million.

Off and on

Hold up, Silver: Disney has stopped pre-production on "The Lone Ranger," which was—or is—to star Johnny Depp as Tonto. An individual close to the project told TheWrap that everyone involved with the movie is "talking about next steps." Meanwhile, TheWrap also reports Mike Myers is on the verge of a deal to make a fourth "Austin Powers" movie. Well, his middle name is "Danger" ...
